

National Council on Public History
Serving the Public History Community Since 1980

Organized to encourage interest in professional history and to bring together people, institutions, agencies, businesses and academic programs associated with public history, the National Council on Public History is the principal professional association that promotes activities in public policy, business history, consulting, education and training, state and local history, museums and archives, and many other fields.

NCPH sponsors The Public Historian, a quarterly journal providing a forum for current issues in public history, special studies, and reviews of current publications, exhibits, films and media. NCPH also publishes the quarterly newsletter Public History News, hosts the H-PUBLIC discussion list, holds a national meeting annually, and provides assorted opportunities for professional development.

Members of NCPH receive The Public Historian and Public History News, plus special prices on NCPH publications.
